Last Thursday, a little son of Mr. P[illegible], about five years old, was playing in the basement of Robinson's mill, Caribou, and it is supposed fell through the floor, as he was found in the water, says the Aroostook Herald. The boy's mother died only a week or two ago, leaving a family of eight boys, the oldest being twelve years and the youngest one two.

The Republican says the seven-year-old son of Daniel Moore, living near the railroad station, Caribou, was badly, if not fatally injured Saturday, by a kick from a horse. The cork of the horse's shoe penetrated the bone of the skull, making a fracture about five inches long. It is thought the boy may recover.

Augustus Pelkey, seven years old, was found drowned at the upper mill, where his father works, Thursday. It is supposed that he attempted to crawl under the carrier bed, when he was caught by the legs and shoved along to a hole in the floor and fell down, a distance of ten feet, striking on the edge of the [illegible] below. When found, his head was under water.

Parties broke into the station-house of-fice of the M. C. R. R. at Gardiner Wednesday night, and stole two lifting bars, a truck gauge, hatchet, adges and other things. One of the bars was so heavy that they did not carry it but a short distance, leaving it behind Blanchard & Milton's stone shed. They pried out the staple that held the lock. Probably they wished these articles for more lucrative plunder in another place, and they may be heard from again.

Wednesday morning, John S. Murray, in jumping from a train at the west end of Ticonic bridge, Waterville, while making a running switch, slipped on the icy ground and fell, sliding several feet down the embankment, and then off over the abutment to the river twenty feet below. No bones were broken, but he sustained a severe sprain of the ankle, and was otherwise badly cut and bruised. In his fall he fortunately struck upon shelly ice between two rocks. A little difference in the direction of the fall might have terminated fatally.

It is not generally known that the popular novelist Rider Haggard is the brother of the Secretary of the British Legation in this country, whose marriage at Washington in 1878 to Mrs. Carrie Carroll, a lady considerably older than himself, caused much talk at the time. The marriage was not a happy one, and a divorce—the second in the wife's case—was the result.

A Florida perfumery company has nineteen acres of tuberoses in Fairfield and San Mateo and expects to plant nearly 200 acres more. The manager of the company says that Florida is the only place in America where these beautiful flowers can be grown successfully. He also says that Florida is far ahead of southern France, where the flowers are raised extensively by irrigating at a great expense. He asserts that he has known the flowers from one acre of land to sell for $2,000 in one season. The expense of planting one acre is less than the cost of planting strawberries, the expense of caring for them not one half as much, and the income fourfold greater.

Says the Albany Journal: "Private advices to the Journal are to the effect that the long existing vacancy in the Presidency of Union College has at last been filled, though the fact will not be formally announced for some days. The Trustees will not announce the tender and acceptance until the occasion of the semi-annual meeting of the Board on January 31st."

Mrs. Henry Clews, wife of the New York banker, is said to be the only American lady who owns a chariot. This chariot was built for Mrs. Clews by a well known firm, at whose warerooms it has been seen. It is very large, and is hung on springs that swing gracefully up over the back and front. A high seat, heavily upholstered is for the coachman, while at the rear is a step for the footmen to stand on, with the wide straps for them to cling to as the chariot bumps over the cobble stones of the city or the "back you mounts," of the country. Around the top of the chariot on all four sides is a row of coronets in raised brass.

The Cattle Commission.

THE WORK THAT HAS BEEN DONE IN THE STATE.

The report of the State Cattle Commission was handed to the Governor and Council to-day. The report contains a detailed account of the cases which have been acted upon by the Commission during the year. The majority of these cases were of disease among cattle, principally tuberculosis. Among horses there have been a number of cases of glanders, which have called for attention by the Commission.

September 3d a case of glanders was reported by F. M. Cunningham of Oldtown, and a large bay stallion was found to be badly affected with the disease, and was at once condemned and destroyed, having been appraised at $50.

This case is of much importance to owners of horses, and especially to lumbermen in this State, who should have their horses carefully inspected before taking them into log camps, where they are confined to close quarters and obliged to feed together, and where one diseased animal could easily contaminate all the others.

September 13th, Mr. Cunningham again reported to the Commissioners that two other horses owned by him, and which had worked in the same camp with the one condemned at Oldtown, were being kept by him at Sebec, near Milo Junction, and he had every reason to believe were affected. Upon investigation, both horses were found affected with glanders, and were appraised at $125.

November 21st a case of glanders was discovered at Bangor, at the stable of John Donovan, which proved to be another of the gang employed in the camp of Mr. Cunningham, of Oldtown. The horse was condemned and appraised at $50.

November 3d, a case of glanders was found at Prentiss, in an old horse belonging to Robert F. Worcester. The horse was condemned, and appraised at $30.

November 2, a case of glanders was reported by the selectmen of Palmyra, upon the premises of Walter A. Wright, which was one of the worst cases of "glanders and farcy" we have ever met in Maine. This horse was bought out of the worthless and dangerous band of broncho brutes that were distributed in our State the past season, and it is the intention of the Commissioners to prevent any further sale of such diseased and unbroken vagabonds in Maine.

Two other horses have already come to our knowledge that were bought out of the same band, but both of them died before being reported to us. Mr. Wright's horse was condemned and appraised at $26.25.

The last case reported to the Commissioners, according to their report, for the year just closed, was a case of glanders in the stable of George Moulton, of Limerick, and a very dangerous case of glanders and farcy was found to exist.

An investigation disclosed the fact that the horse had been sent from Massachusetts into this State, over the Portland and Rochester Railroad, three weeks before, by his owner, Mr. G. M. Tibbetts, of Boston, and it was proven by the stablemen who took the horse from the cars at Waterboro Centre and led him to Limerick that he was in a thoroughly diseased condition on his arrival at Waterboro.

In consideration of these facts, the Commissioners ordered the horse quarantined, but refused to have the animal destroyed and appraised at the expense of the State, and the matter was at once referred to Attorney General Baker for his opinion as to the liability of the State, should similar cases arise. For if any party could bring glandered horses from Massachusetts, where the State pays nothing for them when condemned into this State, where the owner can recover three-quarters of their value (not exceeding one hundred dollars), our limited appropriations would soon become exhausted in paying for this class of cases. The opinion of the Attorney General fully sustains the action of the Commissioners, and refers all persons bringing diseased animals into Maine to their own liability under Section 7, Chapter 133, of the public laws of Maine of 1887.

Owing to the prevalence of glanders in neighboring States, and to the highly dangerous liability of its communication to animals and mankind, rendering it a constant menace to human life, the provision of the law in these cases will hereafter be rigidly enforced.

In conclusion, the Commissioners say: "A summary of the whole number of cases reported to the Commissioners is 65, embracing cities and towns distributed from the western boundary of our State, to Aroostook county. Of these, 48 herds of cattle were inspected, and 16 stables and lumber camps. Thirteen head of cattle were condemned and destroyed at an expense of $399.75; and 11 horses also condemned and destroyed, at an expense of $620.50; making a total of $930.25.

"When we come to consider the valuation of live stock in this State is rising $10,500,000, and that but 13 head, valued at but $399.75, have been found affected with contagious disease, and that among our rapidly increasing stock of horses, but four cases of glanders valued at $180.25, have been discovered outside of one lumber camp, where seven horses prove to have all been inoculated from a single case, taken together with the fact that but a single notice remained in the hands of any of the Commissioners on the first of January, is proof positive that Maine is justly entitled to a clean bill of health for her flocks and herds, such as can be claimed by no other State in the Union.

"By reference to Sec. 2, chap. 133 of the new law, it will be found that in cases of animals condemned and destroyed by order of the commissioner, the owner, or owners thereof can recover three-fourths of their value, as determined upon the basis of health before infection, and the full appraised value in case of animals exposed to either of these diseases, but not themselves actually diseased,—out of any money appropriated by the legislature for that purpose; provided, however, that they shall not pay more than $200 for an animal with pedigrees recorded or recordable in the recognized herd-books of the breed in which the animal described may belong, nor more than $100 for an animal which has no pedigree.

"It will thus readily be seen that upon the appearance of any contagious disease in such valuable herds of pedigreed animals as those of our late Governor, or Hall C. Burleigh, and many others, the entire appropriation of the year would be wiped out in the payment of a single herd leaving the Commission powerless to provide for emergencies, only too liable to arise. We believe the new law should receive the prompt attention of the next legislature of Maine and that the several important particulars be reconstructed or modified so as to meet all reasonable demands in this State in protecting our domestic animals from contagious diseases and in maintaining that high standard of health which they now enjoy."

The Magazines.

The January WIDE AWAKE is the New Year's issue, a fine holiday number, delightfully pictorial, giving as it does a dozen of the beautiful pencil pictures of child-life by the English pencilling of Warwick Brookes, together with an autograph letter of Mr. Gladstone's. Mrs. Fetherbrow's account of him is very interesting. But the most valuable article of the number is The Foster Children of George Washington, the first of Mrs. Harriet Upton's series, Children of the White House. This has seventeen illustrations. Another delightful contribution is an illustrated article by Maud Howe (daughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe) entitled My Friends, the Dogs; this furnishes the frontispiece; Miss Maud Howe and her dog Stubb, from the famous painting by ... C. Porter in the Corcoran Gallery, Washington. Prof. Roberts of Kings College, Windsor, furnishes a good true story, The Bull and the Leaping-Pole. Olive Risley-Seward gives an exciting story of her journey to Peking with Secretary Seward in his trip around the world.

Mrs. General Fremont in her turn of a Coverlet, writes a pathetic account of Farragut and his flagship the Hartford and the taking of the famous old warship out of commission, and makes a powerful appeal to the country and to Congress to save the vessel as a national possession, as the English nation preserve the old warship of Lord Nelson. Charles Barnard tells a weather experiment article, When Does Spring Begin? and E. H. Carpenter of the Boston Advertiser explains the Fisheries Trouble. Mrs. Susan Archer Weiss writes of Christmas Mince-Pie, E. D. The January number of the ECLECTIC, beginning a new volume, has a fine steel engraving of the Interior of the Coliseum at Rome. The number presents to its readers a number of strong and readable articles. The leading paper, by Emilio Castelar, the great Spanish statesman, whose name is so widely identified with liberal movements, is on The Papacy and the Temporal Power. The Story of Zebehr Pasha is completed, and the succeeding paper, on French Socialism, by M. Kaufman, will be found to touch current problems in a very important degree. The well-known scientist, Alfred Russell Wallace contributes a study of The Antiquity of Man in North America, and presents views of great interest. On Some Differences between Colleges and Castles, is a pleasant essay. J. A. Farrar throws light on one of the great religions of the world in The Religion of Mithra, a study of Zoroastrianism. A writer in the Westminster Review gives us a brilliant and entertaining social study in The French Women of the Century. H. G. Keene writes of Omar Khayyam, the great Persian poet and moralist, who has recently been made widely known to English readers.

H. M. Hyndman, the Socialist, answers Mr. Mallock's recent articles in a short paper on Wealth and Ability. The Nerve Cure Rest, by James Muir Howie, ought to excite the interested reading of thousands of readers in this nervous and fretful age. There is a striking short story by J. H. Shorthouse, A Teacher of the Violin. The poetry of the number consists of several admirable new translations from Schiller, by Sir Theodore Martin. As this number begins a volume it offers a favorable time to begin subscriptions.

Published by E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond Street, New York. Terms, $5 per year; single numbers, 45 cents; trial, subscription for 3 months, $1. Eclectic and any $4 Magazine, $8.

Scrofula is probably more general than any other disease. MONDAY, JANUARY 16, 1888.

The Portland Evening Express says: The Waldo-wake Republicans of Bangor have organized a club which promises to prove highly beneficial to the cause of good government in the Eastern section of the State. Ex D A Robinson is President of the club.

In view of the proposed tariff legislation in Congress a canvass has been made of the Democratic side of the House, the result being anything but encouraging to the free trade leaders. When Congressman Randall had the assurance of support from twenty-eight Democrats, from this canvass it appears there are fifty-five Democrats who will vote against any such bill as that prepared by Mr Morrison in the last House. This does not look much like the rapid growth of the revenue reform or free trade policy dictated by the Administration organs.

There was an amusing scene in the House Friday. "Premier" Mills assuming to be controlled the action of the House on all matters moved that when they adjourn it be to Monday. This did not suit some of the Democratic members who opposed the motion, whereupon Mr Mills made the remarkable statement that he had given certain parties positive assurance that there would be no session Sunday and was very angry at the opposition. The situation was humorously enjoyed by the Republicans. The House voted to reject Mills's motion but finally helped him out of a predicament by adjourning over Saturday. In the future Mills will doubtless be more cautious in his promises as to the time of adjournment.

Chairman of the Missouri Democratic State Committee makes a frank confession of the unfavorable prospects of the party in the State. He confesses that the outlook from a Democratic standpoint is bad enough, and is afraid of the result of the next tariff declaration of the President.

South and Southwest Missouri industries cannot exist under free trade. Our people want the interests are the largest in the Union. The interests in the Springfield districts always decided on this issue, and un formly sends a protective tariff Republican to Congress, except in the case of Charles Morgan who was a protectionist. The same result would follow in the Mount Vernon district, which has been worked down by rive counties which Democrats are still crawling out of, but in favor of anything that is branded protection.

The Pittsburg Dispatch's reference to the deplorable condition of the postal service of Democratic rule we have received several letters declaring that we did not touch this case half strong enough. One gentleman writes that the mail matter reported constantly delayed until three or four days at one time and that a postal card mailed in Canada December 6 reached Bangor December 17, being fourteen days going eighteen miles. A gentleman writing at Newport writes that the Whig reaches there very irregularly, Monday's mail frequently coming with Tuesday's, and sometimes the Friday's is even later. One of our own citizens recently received a letter received at the Bangor postoffice December 20, which failed to reach him for 15 days after its arrival. Such cases are getting thoroughly disgusted with Democratic reform in the postal service.

Postmaster Pennypacker has this to say of the enthusiasm of W J Scott of Connecticut, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, for free coal: Mr. Scott, like many other bituminous coal producers, is sending a great deal of coal to be used and has to pay a duty of 50 cents a ton to get it there. He does not fear competition with Nova Scotia coal even if such, and he wants the United States to remove its duty on the bullet that Canada could do the same. Ex Senator Wallace, who is also extensively engaged in the coal business, is probably as anxious for free coal as Mr Scott wants. He has recently made heavy investments in some Canadian iron ore mines, and he has a most restless fear that his Canadian iron ore shall not come into this country free. The same is the case with many others who carry out his free coal on bring his free iron ore.

New York Evening Post quotes a paragraph from a Washington correspondent to the effect that Hoskins was at last ordered out as the Treasury and Secretary Fairchild were waiting to unload him, when this popular clamor should so far subside that they would not appear to be driven so Mr Cleveland rather than yield to public sentiment has retained in the Government service a man he knows to be unworthy of trust for of course he would not have desired to "unload him if he had not known the charges preferred against him were well founded. For the same reason Mr Cleveland retains the services of Attorney General Garland, although well aware of his scandalous record. That is the kind of a reformer Grover Cleveland is. His foolish disposition may lead him to successfully defy public opinion for a time, even to the extent of standing by Higgins and Garland, but there is a time coming when he will find that public opinion is stronger than Grover Cleveland and that time is in November next when he will receive a cordial invitation to retire to private life.

The Grand Jury has reported on the Dion, Miss election and find that it was really very peaceable, the "only evidence of intimidation being the "red circular," the author of which, struggle to locate, the jury was unable to discover, but confident it was the work of "irresponsible persons." This is a truly valuable report. The "circular" to which incidental reference is made by the jury was a distinct warning that colored voters would go to the polls at the peril of their lives and was put forth by an organization appointed a committee to see that the "white man's ticket was elected." So thoroughly was the work of intimidation carried on that not a colored man went to the polls, not caring to risk their lives, which accounted for the "peaceable election." Even the Memphis Appeal, a Democratic organ, deprecates the "outrage" as one likely to cause "a Congressional investigation that may cost the National Democratic party success in November." It is bad enough for the White League of Jackson to steal an election, but it is infinitely worse for men sworn to uphold the law to come forward as the champions of lawlessness.

The free trade Democrats in Congress are in a state of nervous desperation. They can't find out what the Republicans intend to do and morally certain that Mr Randall will be ready to fight any measure likely to originate in Mr. Mills' committee. The statesman from Texas finds the tariff a disagreeable question to handle with a Presidential election so near at hand.

One cannot help wishing that Abraham Lincoln might have an opportunity to express in his inimitable style the opinion which that broad-minded patriot must entertain of a party which has sunk so low as represented by a Chandler in the Senate and a Boutelle in the House.—New York Evening Post.

A more appropriate subject for the martyred President would be the man who now occupies his seat in the White House who deliberately planned to surrender the rebel battle flags for votes and then plead ignorance of the law as an excuse for his shameful attempt to barter those trophies of a rebellion which cost President Lincoln his life, or the organ of the Administration, the Post, which now sneers at the Grand Army of the Republic, the remnant of that glorious body of men, who at Lincoln's call sprang to the defense of their country, as "an organization chiefly concerned in extorting undeserved offices and pensions for unworthy members." That is the extremity to which the Post was driven in its efforts to defend Grover Cleveland from the right-eous indignation which his acts had aroused in the breasts of the noble men who were patriots when it meant something to be a patriot and stand upon the platform of the broad minded patriot Lincoln and elevation Grover Cleveland significantly failed to reach in 1884, because he was devoid of patriotism then as he is to-day.

The construction given to the postal laws as to second and third class matter by Postmaster General Vilas, which has been popularly characterized as stupid, and which has caused more annoyance and loss to the general public who patronize the mails than any regulation ever made by any administration of the Post Office Department, is pretty certain to result to the ultimate advantage of the people, says the Washington correspondent of the Boston Journal. There has seldom been a better illustration of the power of public opinion upon Congress than the speedy action of the Post Office Committee, and the passage by the House of the bill relative to permissible writing on second, third and fourth class mail matter. There is no branch of the public service which reaches every hamlet in the United States as the Post Office Department does, and from every hamlet in the United States have come complaints at the policy of the Vilas administration on this subject. The consequence has been that the House Post Office Committee at once proceeded to mature a bill which should authorize the inscriptions upon wrappers of mail matter of that class which the Post Office authorities had decided that existing law forbids. The committee went further than that, and reported a bill which permits more privileges than were authorized under the old usages, which at last had come to have the effect of law, and the House, without any opposition, and with scarcely any debate at once passed the bill.

The Cattle Commission

Commending on the report of Commissioners Reed Bailey and Harris, an abstract of which is given on another page the Lewiston Journal says:

Their praiseworthy efforts made in Maine, to stamp out tuberculosis and other contagious diseases among cattle, have attracted the attention of English scientists. A writer in a recent number of the London Lancet, England's leading medical publication, reviews the Maine cases and the deductions of our Board of Health from them and says the matter deserves greater attention in England. The Lancet writer opinion is that while the milk of tuberculosed animals should not be used until it has been thoroughly boiled yet the risk is little danger in eating the cooked meat of such animals if they are killed before the disease has reached an advanced stage. In this opinion he coincides with Dr Bailey of the Maine Cattle Commissioners. An inspection of cow-houses and dairies for the elimination of tuberculosis, on the Maine plan has been commenced in England.

In the annual report of the Cattle Commissioners they make the gratifying declaration that Maine herds are freer from disease, than those of any other State in the Union. With a thorough inspection it has been found necessary to kill only three head of neat stock and eleven horses during the year, and the cost to the State has been but $330, for the condemned animals. This is a remarkable showing, in consideration of the fact that the value of the live stock in Maine is over $16,000,000, and it could not be made but for the prompt and vigorous exertions of certain of the State authorities when they became aware of the ravages of tuberculosis at Orono. We think the people of Maine will never regret that Dr Bailey and Mr. Bolt were active to the dangers of the situation last winter and insisted on killing those bulls. Their act has not only been indorsed in Europe and America, it has been justified by its results.

SELFISHNESS.

If there is any pre dominant chord in the teachings of Christ, it is the admonitions against selfishness that pervade them, and, if there is any moral weakness that principally militates against the acceptance of the blessings of life insurance, it is selfishness again. To the man who carries his for himself, pure life insurance has nothing to offer. It is essentially a matter of self denial for the benefit of others. It clearly follows that no one can lay claim to the name of Christian, who has not covered his expenditures with its sheltering mantle.—Amid Advocate.

THE BLADDOCK DISASTER.

Condition of the Injured—Stealing from the Wreck.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Jan. 14.—The relatives of George B. Wentworth were yesterday summoned to his home at Dover by the news that Congressman W. P. Kimball passed a restless night, but is quite bright to-day. Mr. Wentworth is improving rapidly. Master Mickey Finney, ten years old, newsboy, is progressing well. The other patients in the hospital are getting on comfortably. Miss Thompson of Portland and Mr. Gardner of Uxbridge, Mass., are improving. It has been learned that all the wreck. Relic hunters have been carrying off everything they could get their hands on. A new water tank has been put in Milford, standing near the point where the wreck was located.

The Injured Persons Improving.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Jan. 15.—The condition at the hospital are very comfortable. Mr. Kimball's case is more favorable than was supposed.

A SENSATION IN BATH.

Ancient Citizen Horsewhips a Well Known Physician.

BATH, Jan. 13.—The upper circles of the Forest City were shaken to-day by a sensational affair in which two well-known physicians and a prominent lawyer were the principal actors. The latter is the homeopathic physician who has for years been William Palmer, Jr., of the Allopathic school, and has been credited here to drive to his office to treat the principal business of his profession. James B. Drake drove. Mr. Drake is a wealthy ship owner and has about fifty years old and has several children. Foresight Dr. Palmer has been Mrs. Drake's family physician for some time, and has been on good terms with the family.

Without exception the doctor attended the lady and found that she was suffering no serious indisposition from the effects of the blow she received. Dr. Palmer then left the house and proceeded to his office, where he was found by Mr. Drake, who drove up to the door, alighted from his carriage and proceeded to horsewhip the doctor. Palmer drew a large and powerful revolver, but did not use it, contenting himself as best he could, and the horse in an excited condition. Mr. Drake's horse became frightened by the assault and started off, but was soon stopped by Mr. Drake, who subsequently applied to Mr. Drake but the body of Rice. By Mr. Drake's direction and drove off.

Mr. Drake is highly spoken of by his friends, while Dr. Palmer is not. Dr. Palmer has been in practice here for some years, and has a large practice. He is a graduate of the Homeopathic school, and has been a resident of Bath for many years. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is a member of the Knights of Pythias. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias, and is a member of the Knights of Pythias.

Schooner Susie P. Oliver, sailed from Rockland, Me., Jan. 3, passed several heavy logs Jan. 5th. Brig Ida Maud, from Halifax Dec. 31, saw a number of logs. Lumber sixty feet long was picked up on the north shore of Bermuda.

The Accounts of Fatalities Multiplying.

Cattle Freeze to Death in Their Stalls.

ABERDEEN, Dakota, Jan. 14.—Judson Westgate and William Lowe, of Minaf, fourteen miles west, started home by team Wednesday afternoon. Several teams have been received from Minaf asking for information. It is probable that both have perished. Information from Bowdle shows that nothing has been heard from a Mr. Paine (who left Bowdle Jan. 4th. Peter Terhune, a farmer, living near Roscoe, is supposed to have perished in the storm. Reports from Hitchcock fifty miles south state that Emil Gilbert was found frozen to death a mile west of the town of Virgil. Frank and W. Nirlson and Joe. Wilson were lost in the blizzard. The bodies of the Nirlsons were found, but there is no trace of Wilson. A man was lost at Northville name unknown. Miss Cora Curtis a school teacher, was frozen to death while coming from school at Delemara, Dakota.

Tales of Suffering and Death.

MITCHELL, Dak., Jan. 14.—A farmer named Allen, five miles north, was caught in the storm with his son getting hay. Both his cattle. The latter was frozen to death and the father will lose both arms. Joseph And rson went to the country after hay before the storm and has not been heard from. A freight crew has been blockaded nine miles north of here on the C. & D. road with nothing to eat since Wednesday.

Great Loss of Live Stock.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Jan. 14.—A great deal of distress is reported from the country tributary to St. Joseph owing to the recent cold weather. Between Platte City and Iowa line and in Southern Nebraska and Northern Kansas farmers are reporting great loss of live stock while last night froze to death in the state. Two stock trains that had been delayed arrived at St. Joseph last night with every head of cattle dead. Most of the passenger trains are abandoned. The Missouri Pacific between Omaha and Kansas City is closed and so is the Burlington and Missouri River road between St. Joseph and Denver.

More Trains Snowbound.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 14.—A cold wave struck this city at noon yesterday and at 9 o'clock last night the mercury was 10 zero, having dropped from 40 above. The snow is falling at 9 o'clock but ceased after about an hour. All trains on the Union Pacific are snow bound at Columbus, Neb., and none have arrived here for 36 hours. Trains on the Santa Fe are also blockaded and are from 24 to 36 hours behind.

Bitter Cold—Serious Results Feared.

HELENA, Mont., Jan. 14.—The thermometer registered 30 degrees below here last night. The cold wave extends over the entire territory, ranging from 1° to 10° below. No trains are moving. Stock is not suffering but serious results are feared if the cold snap continues. Two men have been frozen to death at Marysville, 20 miles from here.

A Sad List of Deaths.

CANTON, Dak., Jan. 15.—The following deaths by the blizzard are reported: Two men at Irlmarbur, Ia.; two school children at Inwood, Ia., two men between Marion Junction and Bridgewaters, one man near White Lake, two boys and 50 head of cattle near Larchwood, Iowa, four school children near Lemrix Dak. One of the last named boys was alive when found and had been in the snow thirty six hours but soon died. At Hitchcock, Dak., Lewis Merriman aged sixty, and his son, living ninety four miles northeast, perished in Thursday's storm. Mr. Merriman was born near Hartford, Ct., and lived forty years at Dixon.

Resuming Railroad Traffic.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 15.—The Manitoba and Northern Pacific road sent out regular trains on their main lines to-night. The Manitoba officials report the line clear to the boundary and the Northern Pacific, open to Bismarck and Missouri river. The snow is also badly banked in the cuts a renewed blockade is probable. The Minnesota and Northwestern trains from Chicago arrived to-day, four days on the road. The passengers report that their wants were adequately provided for by the officials.

Coldest on Record—Two Persons to Death.

NEBRASKA CITY, Jan. 15.—It was 28 degrees below zero last night, the coldest in the history of the city. Emil Grossman, a farmer near Peru, and a child of a farmer in Hendricks precinct, were frozen to death.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.

Two Men Shot and a Young Woman Cuts her Throat.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., Jan. 15.—At Hancock Carrie Brockaway, the handsome daughter of a farmer, received marked attention from Washington Sweet. His attentions were strongly objected to by the girl's father and two brothers, who warned him to cease. The lovers met in sequestered places, the girl showing considerable spirit in the matter. Brockaway and his sons, armed with shot guns and revolvers, set out for Sweet's house. He heard of their coming, barricaded his doors, placed his gun handy and awaited their arrival. The Brockaways demanded admittance and the answer was a shot from one of the windows wounding one son in the hip. The father and the other son dragged him behind a wood pile and he gun shooting at the window. Sweet returned the fire for a few moments when he ceased. Meantime Carrie, hearing of the action of he father and brothers,

Started for Sweet's house

arriving shortly after Sweet ceased firing. The Brockaways approached the house, she calling to her lover not to shoot. The door was forced and Sweet was found on the floor apparently dead, with a bullet wound in his right shoulder. Carrie gave an agonizing scream upbraided her father and brother for causing the death of her lover, and seizing a carving knife, cut her throat, falling across her lover, and bled to death before a doctor could be summoned. The wounded Brockaway was carried into the house when it was found that his hip was badly shattered and he was in a critical condition. Sweet was hit by a bullet from a revolver which passed upward and lodged in his neck, and is dangerously hurt. The population is wholly French Canadians and there is high excitement dividing their sympathies. More shooting is likely to occur.

FROM WASHINGTON.

News About the Capital

Resolution Passed by the Wool Conference.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—A resolution was adopted by the wool conference to-day, proclaiming anew their deep conviction that protection by tariff of the production of wool and of the manufacture of wool is demanded by the best interests of the American people. The increase in clip American wool from 60,264,23 pounds in 1859, to 302,000,000 pounds in 1885 while the imports of foreign wool advanced only from 26,282,935 pounds to 70,096,170 pounds within the same period demonstrates the effect of protective duties in promoting sheep husbandry in this country and adding to the sources of a tional prosperity and wealth.

The fact that a reduction in the tariff on wool in 1883 was immediately followed by a decrease in the number of sheep in the country from 50,620,520 in 1884 to 44,750,314 in 1887 gives warning that the abolition of duties on wool would seriously cripple the raising of sheep in this country, which is the third industry in quantity among the industries of the world, and thus increase the price of wool all over the world while the consequent destruction of sheep would materially affect the supply and price of meat, and, to a considerable degree, all provisions.

STORM OF DEMOCRATIC DISCORD.

Alexander H. Troup Denounced in a Circular.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 14.—The Union of which Alexander Troup, collector of Internal Revenue, is editor created a sensation in political circles, to night by printing the text of a circular, which, it is alleged, is being secretly circulated among the rectifiers, wholesale and retail liquor dealers and brewers of the State, to obtain signatures, and then be forwarded to Washington, the ultimate aim being to nullify Troup's influence in State and national politics and ask his removal from the office of Collector of Internal Revenue. The authors of the circular are supposed to be the anti-Troup wing of local Democrats which, for years, has bitterly opposed Troup's political aspirations. The circular is a most vindictive attack upon Troup. It says the appointment of Troup as collector has caused constantly increasing dissatisfaction among the Irish-American party in this State; declares that his course since his appointment has been so notoriously un-Democratic, and so generally unsavory politically, as to impair the confidence of the Irish voters in the Administration he represents to such an extent as to threaten a Republican victory in the State next fall. The circular then goes in detail Troup's political record and accuses him since his appointment of un-Democratic character, vile and slanderous attacks upon representative Democrats who have borne the brunt of Democratic battles, interference in his official capacity with church fairs and society plans and excursions where privileges have been exercised in honest ignorance of internal revenue restrictions, which were never enforced under a Republican administration, persistent hounding of individuals whose carelessness rather than criminality placed them in his official power; all these which, the circular says, raised a storm of Democratic discord that threatens to burst with terrible force next November. He is accused of making his office oppressive to those who have unwittingly violated the Internal Revenue laws and those singled out for oppression have been, in most instances, Irish voters or workers in the Democratic ranks.

The Union says, editorially, the Collector of Internal Revenue, so far as allusion is made to his official acts, hopes the widest publicity may be given to the charges to be preferred, and the most thorough, searching investigation made. If the statements are true the Collector should be removed, if untrue, the author of the circular should be shown up in his true colors.

THE CARLISLE THUG HOP OAKS.

The Case Not to be Reopened.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The contested election case of Thomas Carlisle was again taken up this morning. T. F. Rice appeared in behalf of Capt. Carlisle and called to the position of the world. He before the committee was a staff officer in the late war, and he had been engaged for the reception of the Civil Rights Bill. He had a large number of disabled soldiers of the late Republican voters, men prominent in politics, all of whom had been arrested in the poll books, in the voting of the various districts, in the counting of votes or the returning records. A long affidavit of Spencer Carlisle was read, which he declined all the charges of being drunk and various actions of an unworthy nature imputed to him.

The committee room I. Rice next session until three o'clock. The first motion was to postpone further consideration of the case. This by a party vote of 6 to 4. A motion to reopen the case was lost. A motion to declare the contest closed the seat was lost, four Republicans having voted with the Democrats. The Democratic Fleming Carlisle right to his seat was put and all the Democrats and the Republicans voted in favor of the Republicans voted in favor of the Democrats. Three Republicans, Lynch, Hooker and Lodge were excused from voting. Finally shows 12 to 0. The Republicans who refrained from voting say the while they do not claim that Carlisle is entitled to his seat they thought it would have been well if the committee had reopened the case, so that such new evidence might be heard.

Business Items.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the most distressing, nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cures of chronic catarrh by any of the multitude of modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising.

Franch, Assistant Superintendent C. F. Cook, Secretary Mrs. C. N. Cushing, Treasurer Miss F. W. Pratt, Librarian R. G. Hillman.

Rubber clothing yesterday was in order for a few hours and then quit quickly. A good part of this day which fell in the form of rain and sleet, made the streets and walks very slippery. Pedestrians had a very difficult time of it, and the street cars were very much delayed.

The only concert in town this week at the Opera House will be "The World on Rollers" and it starts out with a bang. It is thought by competent judges that the "World" will undoubtedly be another week of ordinary entertainments. Tuesday evening Mr. W. H. Holloway states that he has the best company that has ever given the play on the circuit.

Notwithstanding the unusually severe cold weather the work on the new building is being pushed rapidly. The stone work is now completed and the brick work is rising rapidly. The building will be a handsome one and will be a credit to the city. It is expected that the building will be completed by the first of May.

Bangor is evidently appreciated by the South American trading companies who barter with the natives that live in land on fine allow streams, judging from the orders for the boats that Mr. Guy Carleton, of Old Town has had to fill recently. He has lately taken an order for a number of batteaus from the Chaco Hydraulic Mining Company, of Quilbo Canon Columbia South America. They are very convenient boats in shallow streams as they draw but little water and will carry a large load.

Yesterday afternoon was not such a one as would ordinarily help the attendance at a religious meetings but the hall of the Y. M. C. A. was well filled upon the occasion of the prayer meeting held from three to four o'clock. Mr. A. G. Rice, the much accomplished pianist, by holding several short but excellent selections from the piano by Mr. Henry Williams fully satisfied the part which he and Messrs. George W. Hinckley must have made a forcible impression upon his hearers, especially the young men for whom he is very popular and by whom he is much esteemed.

A large audience will undoubtedly be present at the lecture this evening before the Central Club by Rev. Thomas H. Hall D. D. of Portland upon Puritan Principle. Dr. Hall is a very able and entertaining lecturer and will undoubtedly please all who hear him. The company will think any of establishing a line of steamers from this city through Kennebec to Boston and Factor to Dexter. The early communication between these places except by stage and telephone line would undoubtedly greatly appreciated by the citizens of the towns through which it would run. It is very probable that the line will be established if the encouragement is sufficient to warrant it.

A number of the operatives employed in the Bangor Woolen Mills will be discharged on account of the mills being shut down for repairs. The company has also been compelled to reduce the number of employees in the dye house. It is expected that the mills will be in operation again in a few days.

WHO SHALL BE FAIREST?

Who shall be fairest?
Who shall be rarest?
Who shall be first in the songs that we sing?
She who is kindest
When Fortune is blindest,
Bearing through winter the bloom of the spring;
Charm of our gladness,
Friend of our sadness,
Angel of life, when its pleasures take wing!
She shall be fairest,
She shall be rarest,
She shall be first in the songs that we sing!

Who shall be nearest,
Noblest and dearest,
Named but with honor and pride evermore?
He, the undaunted,
Whose banner is planted
On Glory's high ramparts and battlements hoar;
Fearless of danger,
To falsehood a stranger,
Looking not back while there's duty before!
He shall be nearest,
He shall be dearest,
He shall be first in our hearts evermore!

A COUNTERFEITER'S STRATAGEM.

His Wild Ride in the Hope of Being Able to Prove an Alibi.

No man proved an alibi better than Jim Brown, known in Ohio's past history as "Chief of the Counterfeiters of Cuyahoga." This band of outlaws dealt principally in bogus money, and their favorite way of escaping justice was by proving an alibi. The band was so numerous, so scattered, and, withal, so loyal, that any sort of evidence to show that a defendant was somewhere else than at the place of the alleged crime at the time of its commission was always forthcoming from the mouths of witnesses who often stood high in the community for veracity. To prove an alibi Jim Brown once rode horseback from Pittsburg, Pa., to Boston, Summit county, O., a distance of about 100 miles, in one night.

The officers arrived at Boston, Brown's home, a few hours after his own arrival. They arrested him. On his trial several witnesses swore that they saw him at sundown the day previous to his arrest at Pittsburg. On the defense, Brown proved by a score of good witnesses that he was at home at sunrise the morning of his arrest, and that his horse was sleek and fresh that day as though it had not been ridden for a month. The court held that Brown could not have ridden the distance in that time and discharged him. But he did ride it, and afterward told how it was done. Finding himself certain to be arrested if he stayed in Pittsburg a certain night, he saddled his horse—a splendid animal—and as soon as it was dark started out on his wild ride of 100 miles. For the first thirty miles his horse kept bravely and steadily to his work. Then Brown noticed by the irregular reach and labored breath that the terrible strain was telling upon his faithful brute.

At the next tavern Brown procured a pint of whisky and, putting half of it into a small quantity of water, gave it to his horse. Then on the road again, his willing animal working more steadily. At every hill he would dismount and run beside his horse till it was passed, then on and away, to stop at the next tavern to give his horse more whisky and water. In this way—galloping furiously along levels, running on foot up and down hills, and stimulating his steed with all the caution a skillful physician would bestow upon a patient critically sick—he reached his home before daybreak, where a confederate was found to devote his entire attention to the jaded horse, while Brown purposely showed himself to as many neighbors as possible, who testified as before stated.—Cleveland Press.

A Boy Among Medical Books.

My grandfather, who necessarily lived before I was born for the purpose of occupying the position of father to my mother, was also a physician—one of the old fashioned sort, who traveled and practiced on the relatively small stock and capital of a lancet and a blue pill, and who puked and purged his patients in the simple, strong and vigorous style of the time that tried men's souls in the days of "1776," and consequently killed or cured in a much shorter period than is accomplished by the present more scientific and refined style of medical practice, which, in my unfortunate way of thinking, too often putters around a sick man or woman, prescribing spoons and tumblers and glasses of water, and No. 6 and No. 8 to be taken once every half hour, first out of one tumbler and then out of the next, until the patient forgets which one she did take out of last, and consequently lives or dies altogether as she pleases. My grandfather, I say, was a physician, and when he died left his library—because he couldn't take it with him, not being able to take out of this world any more than he brought with him, if, indeed, he did as much.

Well, I, when a boy, had access to his library, and, being of a studious and meditative turn of mind, at times used to pour over these medical works in order to find out what was the matter with me when I was sick, for from the age of 6 to 10 I was sick quite often, sometimes with complaints I ought to have had, and sometimes with complaints which a boy of that age had no business to have. But in every case when I went to my poor dead grandfather's books I always had the complaint I wanted, and found that every symptom laid down in the book fitted the disease I was after.—Prentice Mulford in San Francisco Chronicle.

Forty-nine Out of Fifty.

In a shooting gallery in Louisville hangs a valuable pistol, one worth about $100, which is the property of whoever will come and take it—after fulfilling one trifling condition. The condition is that he shall equal a feat in pistol shooting once performed in this same gallery. A target was set up at the usual distance for pistol practice, and about the white a moderately large ring was drawn about as wide as any point on the circumference as a quarter of a dollar. On this ring fifty marks were made, so that the center of the target was surrounded by a circle composed of fifty white spots. These were the marks, competitors having fifty shots each. William Hanlon, one of the famous acrobats, is a great pistol shot, and some years ago succeeded in making the remarkable score of forty-nine out of fifty possible hits. This score has never been equaled, and the beautiful pistol offered as a prize still hangs in the gallery awaiting an owner.—Chicago Tribune.

Improvements in Surgery.

A German physician, in an article on the late Professor Langenbeck, enumerates the many improvements which surgery owes to him. His methods were used during the last war with France, and thanks to this circumstance thousands of soldiers now possess their limbs in sound condition, which the doctors of the old school would have amputated.

A Shrewd Advertiser.

"My stars," exclaimed a man, shoving some one who stood near him, "you have trod on my corn."

The fellow snatched out a box of ointment, and replied: "I can relieve you, sir, in a few minutes. Only ten cents. Indorsed by the medical fraternity everywhere. There is no use in suffering. One box! Thank you," he added, as he put the money in his pocket.

"It was an accident you found him," some one remarked to the salve dealer.

"Oh, no, it wasn't. If you ask a man if he's got corns he don't want to talk to you, but when you find out that he's got 'em the chances of telling him medicine are good. I advertise my medicine by going into crowds and slyly feeling for corns. Yonder stands a fat fellow. When the crowd gets thicker I'll go over and tap his hoof. Oh, yes, it may be painful, but, my dear sir, the business of this country must be carried on regardless of sentiment."—Arkansaw Traveler.

A Needed Invention.

There was an invention patented a few years ago having trap doors opening inwardly in the floor of railroad cars. It seems as though it might be used to advantage in many cases, allowing exit when the car overturned, half or fully, and the ends in contact with others.—Boston Budget.

An Absolute Non-Conductor.

An absolute non-conductor, incombustible alike to heat or cold and absolutely fire proof, has at last been discovered in pulverized paper. I tried the discovery last winter by packing the drain and water pipe of my residence with it, and all the pipes are on the outside of the building, and the season was the severest of many years. My plumbing did not cost me twenty-five cents. As a covering for steam pipes it acts equally as well. Pulverized paper, I repeat, is an absolute non-conductor.—Globe-Democrat.

Mr. Freshly's Excuse.

Instructor (sternly)—Mr. Freshly, this is the third time that you have handed in only three pages of written matter, while the rest of the class hand in five.

Freshly, '91—Yes, sir, but I struck with a bright idea! I use over so much thicker paper.—Harvard Lampoon.

SEEING THE CZAR.

A LIVING, MOVING ILLUSTRATION OF THE RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT.

A Grand Pyrotechnic Display on the Czarina's Birthday—Cossacks, Soldiers and "Citizens"—Tyranny of the Secret Service Chief—The Cossack's Hand.

A few nights ago I attended the illuminations at Peterhoff in honor of the czarina's birthday. The czar's palace is on a peninsula, and the grounds and buildings occupy almost a mile square—the most superb structures, fountains and miles of the finest parking and drives in the world. Scores of buildings and fountains, hundreds of trees and great crowns, crosses and figures, besides miles of high walls, were covered with colored lamps. There were millions of lights, and it required a regiment of soldiers and hundreds of civilians weeks to put them in place. All was paid for from the public treasury, or rather the czar's treasury, replete by the people.

At a time in the evening when the fountains and lights glistened most, the bands played loudest, and the pyrotechnics and cannon from the men-of-war in the gulf glared and roared best, the royal family gave the assembled multitude a rare treat. It showed itself. Seldom it is that people in Russia see their emperor, their czar, because he suspects them of designs.

I was making my way between two of the great blazing walls of colored lights, through one of the drives, when a detachment of Cossacks came dashing along, slashing their sabers and driving the people out of the way. In their wake came soldiers on foot, and great detachments of men in citizen's clothing. The latter stationed themselves in front of the lines of the masses. A din of voices—lusty cheering is heard in the distance. It comes nearer, then nearer. More Cossacks, more soldiers, more men in citizen's clothing, and farther back we are crowded. The tier of officious citizens is re-enforced in our front, and many finger in the driveway. Finally the caravan comes in view. More Cossacks, soldiers, citizens. Eight white horses, each one on the left bearing a liveryman, are next seen, then the royal equipage, an immense, gold mounted chariot. The czar, a great burly fellow with full beard, crown and uniform, is on the left seat in front. The brother, the crown prince, the czarina, and grand dukes, etc., make up the load. On every hand of the carriage, four deep, are Cossacks, while the driveway in front and rear is blocked with soldiery, making a perfect shield against violent attack.

WHO THE "CITIZENS" WERE.

The "citizens" who were so very plentiful and officious were the most experienced detectives and body guards in the empire. There were thousands of them. It would have been impossible for one to raise his or her hand against the czar or any member of his family. It is the boast of the Russian authorities that their detectives have eyes in every portion of their heads and bodies. The whole service of protecting the crown and members of the family, and suppressing all thoughts of dissatisfaction with the present form of government, is in full charge of Gresser, chief of the secret service. The authority of this officer is appalling. He can order into exile or the execution yard any one suspected of unlawful or disrespectful acts or intentions. He attends the theatres, and may be said to run all places of amusement. If he is displeased with anything he suppresses it, and there is no redress.

There are some acts of Gresser which are commendable. He permits no unnecessary exposure to fire, no loss of water, no beggary. Recently he was at the Garden Theatre, where the usual performance takes place on a stage, and people enjoy the refreshments at hand. One of the waiters at a table made an insulting observation to a lady. The matter was reported to Gresser, who on the spot closed the theatre and garden and kept them closed for six weeks, although the daily and nightly profits exceeded 3,000 roubles. There was no appeal from the verbal order. The license of other officers is quite as great. That of the Cossacks is astonishing.

In the streets of St. Petersburg, Moscow, and other cities in Russia the stranger is attracted by squads of murderous looking, mounted soldiers. They are mounted and live on horseback, and are expert horsemen. They wear round caps, loose coats, with belts, top boots, great jingling spurs, broad sabers, and in their holsters are heavy pistols. Swung across their backs are carbines, in addition other cases. They carry the ancient battle ax attached to a fifteen foot staff, swinging from a socket at the foot rest. All ride rapidly, are swarthy and rough looking, and look more like war and bloodshed than anybody or anything else. These are the famous Russian Cossacks, the defenders of the empire since it was established.

THE HAND OF THE COSSACK.

Throughout the history of Russia the reader sees the hand of the Cossack. He was first and last in battle. When Napoleon, in 1812, after taking Moscow and leaving his shattered army freezing and starving in the dead of winter to struggle back to France, started on his memorable run to Paris, the Cossacks pursued the fleeing forces and made mince meat of them. While the French soldiers were freezing in a temperature 30 degs. below zero and filling up the Volga and other streams they attempted to ford, the Cossacks with ease slayed the enemy, one Cossack being equal to twenty French soldiers. The Cossacks of old were a local race, a that is held sacred, but he has degenerated.

Now the Cossack is a plunderer. He is furnished with a horse, arms and ammunition, and gets rations when in camp, but must forage when on the march, which is nearly always, and has no pay. But, for a natural pillager, he gets something better than pay. He has complete immunity from punishment for any crime other than disloyalty and wanton murder. The government makes him a licensed plunderer and tells him to "forage." He becomes a brigand, and no secret is made of it. Peasants and villages are robbed by these soldiers, travelers garroted, and nothing is said or done about it. The Cossack is a privileged character.

And so much like the ideal of the czar is the Cossack that he is made the crown's body guard. At Peterhoff, and wherever the czar is, there one finds about a regiment of Cossacks, riding like mad, committing depredations and acting the ruffians they are. They are the best living, moving illustration one sees in all Russia of the character of the government and its ruler.—Cor. New York Sun.
